Remember This.

Lest we forget, let it be remembered:

It was the Republican national convention in 1908 that declared for immediate statehood.

It was a Republican president who recommended to congress that an enabling act be passed.

It was a Republican house and senate that passed such an enabling act and a Republican president who signed it.

It was a Republican constitutional convention that drafted the constitution, and it was a Republican president who declared it was good and ratified it.

It was a Republican senate that passed the final resolution recently and a Republican statesman who put it through a Democratic house after the Democratic house had made a grievous blunder that drew the presidential veto. It is a Republican president who will issue the statehood proclamation.

And let it be remembered, too, that the Democrats tried in every which way to place obstacles in the way of statehood and that they placed the only taint upon the whole statehood legislation, "the little blue ballot."—New Mexican.

We Are All Farmers

Most men can eat a slice of bread in two minutes.

But it took a farmer a whole year to raise the wheat for that bread.

The farmer works hard for his money. Anything which you work hard for is worth keeping. Anything worth keeping should be kept in the safest place.

It is much more difficult to steal and carry a crop than its equivalent in cash.

You can't find a safer place than this bank.

After all, we are all farmers.

Our earning period is our season of plenty—our harvest time. During that period, we must save for the winters of old age and misfortune.

We can do this best by banking.

Our Hobby is Safe Banking
